A War Ledger

FOR ALUMNI OF NICHOLS JUNIOR COLLEGE

1939 - 1943

World War II wrote finis to the opening chapter of the history of Nichols Junior College. The twelve years from 1931 to 1943 were years of pioneering and development. They were the years when growth in terms of numbers of students, of expanding physical plant and of improved facilities was steady and sure. They were the years when a new idea—a two-year collegiate curriculum in business administration —was finding its place in New England education.

Human institutions are as subject to human frailty as they are to human greatness. From the United Nations to the youngest den of Cub Scouts the basic problem is to learn to work together in the pursuit of a goal. The effective techniques for co-operative effort are different for every organization. They must be developed by its members and adjusted to its growth. This is a slow process at best, but we who watched it and participated in it at Nichols were confident that each unit—sutdent body and faculty, Justinians and Dorm Council, Administration, Trustees and Advisory Council—was finding with increasing certainty of success its unique contribution. The years from 1931–1943 were also years of learning.

In a sense the climax of these years was Nichols' contribution to the War. The opening chapter, the story of the twelve peace time years, is written down in other "Ledgers" and in the "Budget." Here is the man-by-man account of Nichols' sons at war.

It is a good story. It is in most instances an overly modest story. And, incomplete though it may be, it says certain things clearly and unmistakeable. The part these three hundred odd* alumni and faculty played is certainly proportionately the equal of any college group.

Nichols' men went to war:

For the Army	227
For the Navy	69
For the Marine Corps	8
For the Coast Guard	6
For the American Field Service	4
Total	314

* Based upon data collected in 1944–45.

This is eighty-three per cent of those replying to our questionnaire. Of this number:

28.7 per cent were enlisted men
36.8 per cent were non-commissioned officers
34.5 per cent were commissioned officers

Because much of the data were gathered nearly a year before V-E day, all figures are tentative and it would be unfair and misleading to enumerate decorations and other honors. But as early as the fall of 1944 Bronze and Silver stars and Purple Hearts were being awarded. Nichols men not only did their jobs, they did them in a manner which was "in keeping with the highest traditions of the service."

Finally, this record tells us that the institution which had a part in the development of these men has proved its worth. It should continue, grow and pursue its destiny. Those of us—students and teachers—who no longer are active participants wish it a sincere "God Speed."

Your belief that Fred may be still alive shows untold Faith in God, but it is my unpleasant duty to verify the War Department notification. Your son was killed by enemy fighters after he left the airplane and was parachuting to earth. I saw him—went to administer first aid, and found him dead. . . . on March 6, Fred realized one of his greatest ambitions—to bomb the city of Berlin. He was a great man—one I shall never forget. . . ."

Since his college days:

Tom worked with his Dad in the Office and Engineering Supply Business at Troy, New York, up to the time when he enlisted with the U. S. Marines, immediately after Pearl Harbor. He is still single and claims that no one will have him. He is attached to the Air Arm of the Marine Corps and was a member of that famous squadron 121, commanded by Major "Joe" Foss on Guadalcanal during the terrific fighting of the Fall of 1942. Stationed at Henderson Field, Tom and his companions were under constant bombardment from the sea and from the air. He is a member of the First Division and wears the Presidential Citation. After a nine months stay in the States, Tom is again engaged in active duty in the Pacific, and would like to hear from his old friends.

David went directly into the Army, being commissioned a Second Lieutenant in the Quartermaster Corps. He was attached to the 44th, Division and went through the maneuvers in the Carolinas until returning to Fort Dix in December, 1941. Toward the end of January, 1942, his Division was transferred to Camp Claibourne, Louisiana. He remained there until May when he was transferred to Camp Barkley, Texas, and attached to the 55th Q.M. Heavy Maintenance Regiment. In less than a month's time he was back in Camp Dix and left for overseas in June, 1942. He has apparently been in and out of the United Kingdom many times during the past two and one-quarter years as he has written of days being terrifically hot and frightfully cold in the places he has been. He has, of course, not been able to mention the names or locations of such places. Some time in April or May he was attached to Hq. & Hq. Detch., O.S.S., the same unit to which Ensign Arthur Wurtmann is attached and until recently Arthur and David shared a flat in London. It was through Arthur that David became attached to the Office of Strategic Services. His last letter indicated he might go to France or be home shortly.

Since his college days:

Len has done a number of things. He worked at the Hood Rubber Co. in Watertown for one year and then volunteered for service in the Naval Air Corps. Len started his training in July of 1942, and in October, 1943, he received his rating of Ensign from the Naval Air Training Station at Corpus Christi, Texas. During his training he was stationed in seven different states so he's had a slight view of the country. At practically every station he'd write home and say he'd met another one of his college pals and since he's been overseas Len wrote to say how swell it was when he discovered one of his Nichols classmates stationed with the Army Unit nearby. Len has been overseas since February. A short while ago we received a letter from the Navy Department saying that Len has been missing in action since August, 19th. Our only prayer now is that he returns to his base safely and that maybe one day real soon he'll come back home again.

Editor's note: We are happy to report that Len is on duty in the United States.
